

Of four signals in one forward pass, coherence keeps the one that distinguishes real from invented outcomes least well

A taller bar means that signal separates the two arms more sharply — not that the model is better.
AUROCs are oriented using known arm labels: they show how much separating information each channel carries, not the performance of a deployable detector.